Shadowbox Live to Bring the 1960s Back to Life with All-New Production This June

(Columbus, OH)— Shadowbox Live's new production Flower Power is bringing the 1960s to the Brewery District this June. Focusing on the cultural revolution that changed everything, the show is inspired by the era's hippies, hair, protests and peace.

"When we conceived this show, we sought to create a joyful, fun and accessible show highlighting the music of the 1960s and the Hippies of the time that celebrated it on their mission to spread peace and love," said Julie Klein, Shadowbox Live's Producing Director. "I think we've achieved what we set out to do. The show features 21 popular songs from the era and will be a great summer outing."

Flower Power will be brought to life through the powerful messages and music of the decade featuring songs from The Rolling Stones, The Beatles, The Who, Sly & the Family Stone, Jimi Hendrix, Aretha Franklin, and many more beloved musicians from the era.

The brand new metamedia production will open Thursday, June 2 at 7:30 p.m. and continues through September on select Thursdays and Sundays. To purchase tickets and learn more about Shadowbox Live programming and performances, visit www.shadowboxlive.org.
